Volunteer puppy walkers take a puppy into their homes for just over a year, getting it used to the hustle and bustle of everyday life. Puppy walkers give their pups a firm foundation for their later training and life with a blind or partially sighted person. A puppy walker takes on a puppy at around seven weeks and nurtures it for the first year of its life, teaching it basic commands and socialising it in as many different environments as possible, under the guidance of the supervisor. All expenses such as food and vet bills are covered.
